[解答例 1]

Given that over 90 percent of people in high-income countries were internet users in 2022, the share of internet users in Japan will increase only slightly this year, if at all. Japan is free from the relatively large regional, generational, and gender gaps seen in middle-income countries, which indicates that those countries still have much room for growth in the share of online users. [64 words]

[解答例 2]

The share of internet users in Japan will likely remain very high in 2026. Although middle-income countries such as India have seen rapid growth in recent years, they still have large gaps between urban and rural areas and between men and women. However, Japan already has very small regional and gender gaps in internet use today. [56 words]

問題4の解答欄

(Q)

[解答例 1]

I am in favor of handwriting, in part because it is an art form that deserves to be preserved. This is especially true in Japan. The country has a long tradition of calligraphy, which values beautiful handwriting. More importantly, writing by hand plays a significant role in expressing individuality. Indeed, some Japanese people tend to write round-shaped characters, while others write sharp or angular ones. Thus, it is safe to say that handwritten characters reflect a writer's unique personality. For this reason, I believe that Japanese companies, in general, still require job applicants to submit handwritten resumes because handwriting shows a person's character. [103 words]

[解答例 2]

I prefer typing to writing by hand because it helps my critical thinking and organization. When I type, I can easily correct my sentences if I change my mind. Some people say that writing by hand lets us think slowly at our own pace. However, typing allows me to review my ideas many times and improve my thinking. It also helps me organize my writing better. I can make clear paragraphs and a better structure. When I write notes by hand, I often need to rewrite them neatly, but typing saves time. For these reasons, I believe typing is more useful for me. [103 words]
